

Early Journal Content on JSTOR, Free to Anyone in the World

This article is one of nearly 500,000 scholarly works digitized and made freely available to everyone in the world by JSTOR.

Known as the Early Journal Content, this set of works include research articles, news, letters, and other writings published in more than 200 of the oldest leading academic journals. The works date from the mid-seventeenth to the early twentieth centuries.

We encourage people to read and share the Early Journal Content openly and to tell others that this resource exists. People may post this content online or redistribute in any way for non-commercial purposes.

Read more about Early Journal Content at <http://about.jstor.org/participate-jstor/individuals/early-journal-content>.

JSTOR is a digital library of academic journals, books, and primary source objects. JSTOR helps people discover, use, and build upon a wide range of content through a powerful research and teaching platform, and preserves this content for future generations. JSTOR is part of ITHAKA, a not-for-profit organization that also includes Ithaka S+R and Portico. For more information about JSTOR, please contact support@jstor.org.

NEWS AND NOTES

Notes of interest to the readers of the Journal should be in the hands of the editor of "News and Notes" not later than the tenth of the month preceding publication.

American Sociological Society.—President James P. Lichtenberger announces that the next meeting of the Society will be held in Chicago, December 27-29, in the Auditorium Hotel. This decision was made by the Executive Committee of the Society following the decision of the American Economic Association to meet in this city. The American Political Science Association and the National Community Center Association will also meet in Chicago in the Christmas holidays.

Boston University.—The Sociological Society of the College of Liberal Arts was established a year ago for the purpose of promoting a more intelligent acquaintance with the vital sociological topics of the day among the students of Boston University. Membership in the society is open only to those students in sociology maintaining a high average who evince special interest and ability. At present the membership consists of fifty-three students, of which number twenty-three are alumni, and thirty are active. Among the subjects and speakers during the year were "Right Interest of Our Young Citizenship in Social Work," by Robert W. Kelso; "Social Problems in China," by Anna Lulu Golisch; "A Psychological Study of Samuel Adams," by Professor R. W. Harlowe; "Mental Hygiene," by Dr. F. E. Williams, and by Dr. Charles F. Bancroft; "Fear as a Basis of Altruism," by Mr. A. L. Miller, president of the society; "Sociology in China," by Professor James Q. Dealey; and "Mental Testing and Family Case Work," by Mr. John P. Currie.—MARY B. BOWDITCH, Secretary.

Brown University.—Brown University is co-operating with Shanghai College in the establishment of a "Brown in China." The University, through its student body and alumni, is planning to establish what ultimately will become a school of sociology, emphasizing the training of teachers in the social sciences and of workers for social settlements and other social agencies. Professor Daniel H. Kulp II, of Shanghai College, is in charge of the work and has in mind the erection of a building to be devoted to sociological purposes, including library, museum, equipment for research studies, and rooms for advanced classes.

A well-established social settlement near the college, in the heart of the mill district of Shanghai, has already justified its existence, and it is expected that the movement for enlargement in sociological directions will rapidly be pushed by Brown University.

Professor James Q. Dealey, head of the department of sociology of Brown University, spent the second semester of 1921 lecturing at Shanghai College.

University of California.—Dr. George B. Mangold, director of the Missouri School of Social Economy, is giving lectures in the summer school on the subjects “Problems of Child Welfare” and “Constructive Social Work.”

University of Kansas.—Dr. Stuart A. Queen, director of the Simmons College School of Social Work, resigned to accept a professorship in the department of sociology.

University of Southern California.—Professor C. E. Rainwater is acting head of the department of sociology for the summer session, in which ten courses in sociology are being offered.

Dr. W. C. Smith was supervisor for a conference on social studies in secondary schools held recently at the University, and participated in by large numbers of public-school teachers and principals of southern California. One of the recommendations of this conference was that the secondary curricula, as far as possible, should be organized with the social studies as a core.

W. W. Clark, social-research expert of the Los Angeles public schools and formerly sociologist of the California Bureau of Juvenile Research, is giving an extension seminar in Los Angeles entitled “Seminar in Social Research,” in which a group of problems in educational sociology is being investigated.

The third edition of the Introduction to Sociology by E. S. Bogardus was published in June by the University of Southern California Press. The new volume contains 450 pages and is built around the central subjects of social attitudes, social values, social interaction, and socialization. It is the second book by the same author to be published in the third edition.

Ten advanced students in social research in the department have completed the collecting of data for a dictionary of social-work terminology.